

I am really shocked that Sinclair Broadcasting's could force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election. To me it is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

It seems that when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy.

I also thought that broadcasting companies were to present a balanced point of view...word from both sides. That certainly isn't happening with Sinclair.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
